Waiheke Island

Waiheke Island also known by locals as 'cascading waters' is situated in the Hauraki Gulf of New Zealand, approximately 17km from Auckland. With hot, dry summers Waiheke is a perfect growing region for a variety of Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Malbec, Cabernet Franc and more recently, Chardonnay. There are several categories of soil type ranging from clay to pumice sand and volcanic ash, each assisting in its own way to help produce the unique varieties which Waiheke has on offer.

Marlborough

Marlborough has become New Zealand's largest and best-known wine growing area in little more than 20 years. The distinctive pungency and zesty fruit flavours of the first wines captured the imagination of the country's winemakers and wine drinkers alike and sparked an unparalleled boom in vineyard development. Worldwide interest in Sauvignon Blanc has continued to fuel that regional wine boom. The free-draining alluvial loams over gravel subsoils in the Wairau and the Awatere River Valley provides ideal growing conditions. Abundant sunshine with cool nights and a long growing season helps to build and maintain the vibrant fruit flavours for which Marlborough is now famous.

Nelson

Nelson has a gentle sun-drenched climate and a spectacular landscape ranging from golden sand beaches to rugged, bush-clad mountains. Grapes are grown in Moutere Hills and Waimea Plains: production is small but quality is impressive overall including some superlative highlights. Excellent Pinot Noir, Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc and aromatics are produced with Nelson also boasting an impressive and eclectic mix of other varieties.

Wairarapa - Martinborough

Martinborough Pinot Noir is the region's most planted and certainly most acclaimed grape variety. The success of Martinborough Pinot Noir has to a large extent driven the rapid development of this very dynamic and quality-focused region. Climatically Wairarapa is more aligned to Marlborough than to any of the North Island regions. The success and style of its Sauvignon Blanc is evidence of this alliance, and whilst the Wairarapa region's production level is relatively low it makes a large contribution to the country's quality winemaking reputation.

Waipara

Waipara Valley is the fastest-growing wine region in New Zealand. Located 40 minutes north of Christchurch, Waipara Valley is also the country's fourth-largest wine region; home to over 1400 hectares of vines and 79 vineyards. The broad range of soil types, from gravelly deposits to limestone soil and alluvial subsoil, coupled with the natural sun-trap of the valley enables the viticulturists of Waipara to produce an expansive, award-winning range of wine varieties. The terroir combined with the long hot autumn period helps produce unique richer, spicier Pinot Noir and dry Rieslings that are the region's specialties. Waipara's winemakers also produce Sauvignon Blanc, Semillon, Pinot Gris, Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Merlot, Gewürztraminer, Syrah and even Port.

Central Otago

Central Otago is New Zealand's highest and the world's most southerly wine region. 'Wines with Altitude' is the slogan of one winemaker. It is also New Zealand's only true continental climate with greater extremes of daily and seasonal temperatures than are found in any of the country's maritime regions. Soil structures also vary dramatically from those of other regions with heavy deposits of mica and schists in silt loams. A new, but aggressively expanding wine area, Central Otago is now New Zealand's seventh largest wine region. Pinot Noir is the dominant grape variety, a status that seems certain to be maintained if demand and accolades are any measure. Chardonnay ranks second with Sauvignon Blanc and Riesling a distant third and fourth. The wines of Central Otago have a purity, intensity and vibrancy that seem totally appropriate to anyone who has visited the region and breathed the pure mountain air.

Hawke's Bay

Hawke's Bay is one of the country's largest regions and has a respected 100 year heritage in wine. The varied topography and wide range of soil types, from fertile silty loams to free-draining shingle, produces a considerable range of wine styles in this large region. Ripening dates for a single grape variety can vary by as much as three weeks between the hot, shingle soils of the Gimblett Road area to the cool, higher altitude vineyards of central Hawke's Bay. Chardonnay is the most widely planted grape variety but the long sunshine hours attract a high percentage of later-ripening red grape varieties such as Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Cabernet Franc and Syrah.

Gisborne

Gisborne boasts the world's most easterly vineyards and the first vines to see the sun each day. The region receives high sunshine hours on coastal plains that are sheltered from the west by a range of mountains. Soils include alluvial loams over sandy or volcanic subsoils of moderate fertility. Chardonnay occupies around half of Gisborne's vineyards and has led grape growers and winemakers to christen their region the Chardonnay capital of New Zealand.
